SIGNS AND SYMPTOMS OF TMJ DISORDERS

1. Headaches, especially headaches around the temple and behind the eyes. It has been estimated that up to half of all headaches are TMJ related.
2. Grinding or clenching your teeth, especially at night.
3. Sore muscles of the jaw and neck. Tired muscles after eating. Sore muscles from clenching or grinding your teeth.
4. Pain or tenderness of the TMJ.
5. Any present or past clicking noises from your TMJ.
6. A rough, sand like, gravelly sound of the TMJ upon movement.
7. A past history of limited opening. Not being able to open your jaw as far as you could in the past. Not being able to open or close your jaw without moving it sideways.
8. Any signs of excess force on the teeth, including:
 - Teeth that are wearing away.
 - Teeth that are chipping or breaking.
 - Teeth that are cracking or splitting.
 - Teeth that are moving.
 - Teeth that are loose.
9. Ear ache, throbbing, or ringing.
10. Pain behind the eyes
11. A change in the bite. The teeth do not feel like they fit together properly.

NOTE: Pain is not a good indicator of the severity of the disease. A joint with minor damage may hurt worse than a joint that is completely destroyed.

Commonly Asked Questions

I have headaches. Is there a chance that it is due to the TMJ?

Many headaches are related to a problem with either the TMJ or the muscles of the TMJ. Many patients who had suffered for years with headaches are now pain free after their TMJ problem was accurately diagnosed and treated.

My jaw joint clicks occasionally. Do I need treatment?

You can not have clicking in the TMJ without having damaged the ligaments that once held the disc in place. The extent of the damage needs to be determined. Not all clicks of the TMJ need to be treated, but some must be to avoid future problems. You must have a doctor who is knowledgeable in TMJ problems evaluate you. A severely damaged joint and a slightly damaged joint can surprisingly appear quite similar. Seeking treatment now may prevent the disease process from progressing into its more painful and destructive stages.

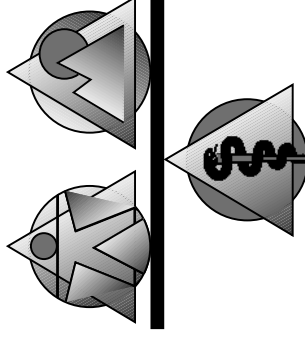

Occasionally my jaw gets stuck and I can not open very wide. If I wiggle my jaw, that frees it up sometimes. Sometimes it does not. What is happening?

Get an examination immediately by a doctor who is knowledgeable in treating TMJ problems. Your TMJ is entering a more advanced stage of breakdown. The disc is getting stuck out of its normal position. Intervention now may prevent you from entering the more serious forms of this disease process.

I grind my teeth at night. I guess I am under too much stress. Is there anything that can be done?

While stress will cause the amount of grinding to increase, it is usually not the primary cause of the grinding. A clinical examination usually will reveal the cause of the grinding. Common causes of grinding are an uneven bite or a damaged TMJ.

TEMPORO-MANDIBULAR JOINT DISORDERS

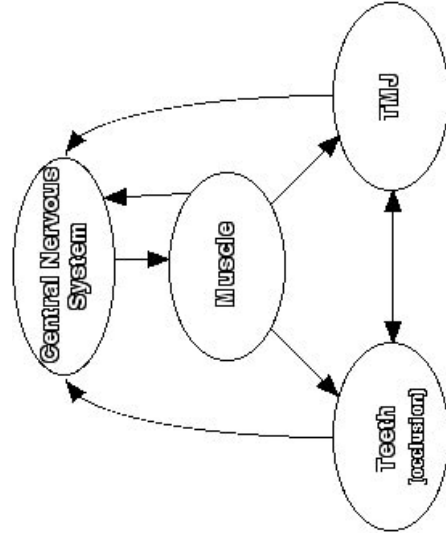

Do you have a TMJ problem?

John R. Droter, D.D.S.

TMJ Disorders are Multifactorial

Temporomandibular joint (TMJ) disorders involve the joint between the mandible (jaw bone) and the temporal bone of the skull. While there are many different problems that can cause pain or discomfort in the head and neck area, TMJ disorders refer to when there is actual damage and breakdown in the TMJ. The breakdown can occur in the bone, disc, ligaments, and cartilage of the joint, affecting the way the joint functions.

A healthy TMJ works in harmony with the muscles of the head and neck, the teeth and the central nervous system (CNS). All 4 entities are dependent on the others to work properly (see diagram above). Any problem in one area will create problems in the other areas.

- TMJ disorders are any disharmony of this system.
- Treatment is aimed at reestablishing harmony between all four areas.

How The TMJ Works

A joint is the connection between two bones that allows movement between those bones. A healthy joint will be able to move smoothly, without pain, through a full range of motion.

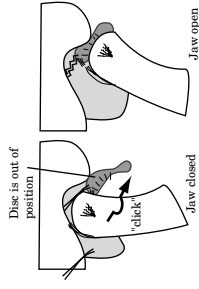

The TMJ is located in front of the ears. It connects the temporal bone of the skull with the mandible (jaw bone), and allows movement between the two bones. (See figures 1-1, 1-2, 1-3) The TMJ consists of both soft tissue (disc, ligaments, capsule, and retrodiscal tissue), and bone (condyle and eminence). Both can undergo breakdown.

Normal TMJ Function

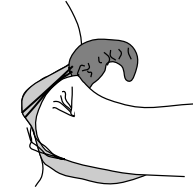

Jaw closed

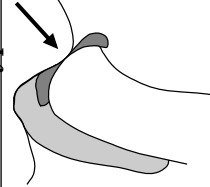

Jaw open

The joint allows you to move your jaw open and close, left and right, and forward and back, so that you may chew, speak, and swallow. The TMJ is actually two joints (a left and a right) that must work in harmony with each other and with the muscles to allow these movements. Each joint is capable of three types of movements; rotating, sliding, and pivoting. If you place your fingers in front of your ears and open and close, you can feel the TMJ and the condyle. Notice that if you only open a small amount and then close, the jaw rotates like a hinge. When you push your lower jaw forward without opening, you will feel it slide. When you open real wide, the jaw both rotates and slides forward. If you move your jaw to the left, the right joint will slide and the left joint will pivot. This is the only joint in the body that rotates, slides, and pivots. If there is any problem with either the joint, disc, ligaments, or bone, then you have a TMJ disorder. Any discomfort when you touch the joint, even very slight discomfort, is an indication that something is wrong. The joint is meant to operate smoothly and pain free.

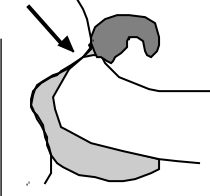

Various types of TMJ BREAKDOWN

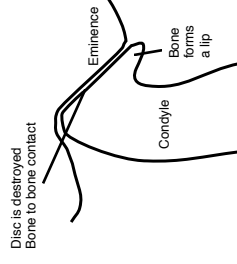

Disc stuck forward
can not open wide

Disc perforation-
A hole is worn through the disc and bone is rubbing against bone.

Retrodiscal perforation-
A hole is worn through the retrodiscal tissue.

Concerning First Appointment and Fees

Many people find it helpful to know what they can expect from a time and financial prospective. Below is an attempt to give you an overview of what you might expect. Let us know if you are encountering any obstacles so we may help.

First Appointment- Is usually a preliminary evaluation of your problem. A history of the problem is taken. The head and neck are examined. Preliminary diagnostic test such as doppler auscultation and range of motion are performed. This will usually take about an hour.

The goal of the first appointment is to answer these questions:

Is the TMJ damaged?

Is the Neck Damaged?

Does this damage contribute to the problems you are having?

What further tests or radiographs, if any, are needed, to develop a definitive diagnosis?

You will be informed and educated as to what your problem might be, and will be given a plan on how best to reach a definitive diagnosis. In some cases, Dr. Droter figures out what the problem is at this appointment and treatment can be initiated. However, most cases require additional information. Once we have an accurate diagnosis, a specific treatment to your specific problem can be chosen. If this is an emergency exam, some form of treatment may be rendered at the first appointment.

Cost Estimate of first appointment

- $190-$1,512 with $1142 being the most common.
- You can be given an exact fee once you have sent in the facial problem questionnaire.
- You will need to pay the full amount at the time of the appointment.
- Cash, Checks or Credit Cards (Master Card, Visa, Discover) are accepted.

Insurance information- There are so many different insurance plans, that it is impossible for us to know what your plan covers. You will need to speak with your insurance company to find out the specifics. Your insurance company is suppose to have staff available to help you submit claims. Some information you may find helpful in speaking with them:

- You may need a referral from your primary care medical doctor before seeing Dr. Droter to get coverage.
- Dr. Droter is a dentist who diagnoses and treats medical conditions of the head and neck.
- The first appointment is considered an orthopedic evaluation of the head and neck, which is a medical evaluation.
- Coverage for Dr. Droter will be in the non-participator category.
- You will be given an insurance form to send into your medical insurance carrier.
- Any benefits you are due need to be sent to you directly from your insurance carrier.
